

ORIENTATION & MOBILITY

Orientation & Mobility (O&M) training is a low vision rehabilitation that helps individuals who are visually impaired or blind, navigate their environment independently and safely.

O&M focuses on both understanding where you are (orientation) and how to move around (mobility) safely and independently. Trainings are individualized and use a combination of sensory information and mobility aids, most notably the white cane.

O&M training focuses on:

- Pre cane training
- White cane training
- Human Guide
- Indoor Travel
- Residential Travel
- Navigation Routes
- Public Transit
- Business Travel

The League has three O&M specialists who work one-on-one with consumers of all ages who are blind or have low vision.

- Individual Education Plan (IEP) Assistance
- Vocational Rehabilitation (VR)
- Private Pay

QUESTION & ANSWER:

Q1: How do you know if you need orientation and mobility training?

A1:

- If you have a progressive visual impairment or are legally blind.
- If you feel unsafe navigating outside your home.
- If you make body contact with walls or other obstacles.
- If you stumble over steps, drop-offs or curbs.
- If you become disoriented in new environments.

Q2: What training does an O&M specialist need to provide training?

A2:

- Masters Degree in Orientation & Mobility.
- Successful completion of an internship with 600 hours of specialized low vision rehabilitation training.
- Our staff is trained in adaptive O&M (wheelchairs, walkers and support canes).
